who dedicate to coach them and parents who support them. But without the base and competitions that are available to them, it would not be possible.

“Our kids, if they played MS flag rugby, can have seven years of experience and skill building by the time they get to college.

“It is fortunate that Guam Rugby has progressed as far as it has and produced the college athletes they have with the limited facilities and resources Guam has. Imagine the potential if it was fully supported.”

Terry Debold

Debold is FD's athletic director.

Caleb Murphy and Alden Bordallo play for Lindenwood University.

“That’s a really complex answer: inspiration, coaches with advanced knowledge of college and international play, definitely high school administrators providing guidance, general growth of the sport throughout the U.S. our geographic location provides great exposure to world class competition, the Guam Rugby Union (not to be mistaken with GRC) helped get rugby into middle and high school interscholastics on Guam long before most of the US. And on and on.”

Yes, indeed. All of those key ingredients have resulted in a buffet of Guam athletes blazing through the rugby pitches of America.
